CONTRACT BRIDGE

Solving of Double Dummy Problem Distinct and Apart From Bridge

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The solving of the double dummy problem, and South again trumped, although an interesting pastime, is totally distinct and apart from bridge as it is actually played at the table. As everyone knows, the very nature of a double dummy problem involves seeing all the cards. In addition, the situations that come up in double dummy problems are very rarely duplicated in actual play.

However, although the hand below was played in a regular rubber game, the play of the declarer was so unusually perfect in a complicated situation that it would almost seem as though it had been worked out after a protracted study with all four hands exposed on the table. Mr. Richard L. Frey of New York City was the declarer. North, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding: South West
 North East
 2 Pass 2 (1) Pass
 5 (2) Pass 6 Pass
 Pass Pass

(1) This reversal of suits by South, showing the four-card spade suit at the level of two-odd, indicates a reasonably strong hand.

(2) A most unusual bid, justified by North's remarkable distribution and the realization that the South hand is a strong one.

West had a very difficult hand to lead from and his final choice of the Jack of clubs cannot really be criticized, though it happens that only the most unusual lead of the club King could have defeated the contract. The Queen in dummy won the first trick, and the Ace of hearts was led. Another heart was continued and trumped with the spade six in South's hand, East discarding a diamond. A diamond was now led and trumped in dummy, and the heart trumped in South's hand and another diamond was trumped in dummy. A fourth heart was led, East discarded his last dia-

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

A reader can get the answer to any question of fact by writing The Salt Lake Tribune Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. Please inclose three (3) cents for reply.

Q. What per cent of the entire turkey crop is sold at Thanksgiving?
 C. F.
 A. Last year about 51 per cent of the turkey crop was sold on the Thanksgiving market.

Q. What was the Ohio company?
 A. V. N.
 A. The Ohio company was composed of a few wealthy Virginians, to whom King George II granted 50,000 acres of land free of rent for 10 years, between the Monongahela and Kanawha rivers, on condition that they plant 100 families and maintain a fort in their new possessions.

Q. What award did Louis Untermyer receive in Italy?
 F. J.
 A. Louis Untermyer is the recipient of a 10,000-lire prize awarded in Italy for the best literary work on the beauties of that country. His work is "The Donkey of God," a collection of Italian folk stories published last year for children.

Q. Which party lost more heavily in the last election as compared with the election of 1932?
 E. W.
 A. The Republicans polled about 3,600,000 fewer votes than they did in the 1932 election, while the Democrats polled about 7,400,000 fewer votes than in 1932.

Q. Do rural or urban boys and girls marry younger?
 I. R. S.
 A. According to the 1930 census, 58 women under 25 out of each 100 in the country are married. Only 47 in the same age class in the city are married. Among the boys, 31 in the country are married, as compared to 25 in the city. A third more rural young people marry between the ages of 15 and 20 than city residents of the same ages.

Q. Please give some information about Grace Moore's leading man in "One Night of Love."

 A. Tullio Carminati, Italian nobleman-actor, was born in Zara on the Dalmatian coast. Mr. Carminati's real name is Count Tullio Carminati di Brambilla. He has appeared at one time or another upon the stage

DIVIDED CHILDREN

Sons and Daughters of Divorced Parents Usually Pay Price of Separation

By ANGELO PATRI

IF THERE is one lot of children more unfortunate than the host of unfortunates it is the divided child, those that have been shared by Solomon's sword. Father gets them for a week-end and one month in summer, mother gets them the rest of the time. Father and mother have been considered, but who considered the children? The parents' rights have been preserved, but what rights worth preserving have the children?

Angelo Patri

The judge can't help it. He does the best for the three parties in the difficulty. The law is a clumsy instrument to administer the affairs of the heart and the soul and children are just that, affairs of the heart and the soul. When the two warring factors went into action they thought only of their own discomfort, their own suffering. At any cost it must cease. The children can be considered afterward. That usually means they are divided, share and share alike.

I have met many such children and I have yet to meet a happy one, one who is completely care-free and at peace with his world, as children ought to be. The loss of one parent sets a child apart from his fellows and that is something childhood finds hard to bear. One parent cannot make a family, try as he may. I have many opportunities to see it tried and rarely does the problem work itself out with satisfaction to the children.

Many a gallant effort is made to fill the breach. Some of the children surmount the difficulty after some years of adjustment. Children can adjust themselves to almost anything. But the fact remains that their hearts know a strange aching, their souls a hidden longing, for the happy homes, the affectionate parents their companions know and love.

What would I do about it? The best I could, as most of the fathers and mothers concerned have done, save for one point. I would never divide the children. For good or ill, I would sheathe the sword of Solomon for all time and give the children to one parent alone. I would disregard the rights of grownup people in the matter and give the children into the hands of the one best suited to care for them. The other one would have to go without his share.

I know that there are mistakes in marriages. It is a human institution. I know that there are impossible parents. But nothing alters the facts where the children enter into the situation. They did not make the mistake. They are dependent upon others for their future as well as their present welfare. They are entitled to happiness, such as is left them. They ought not to be torn apart constantly by suffering now one parent, now another. They have first right.

Which parent gets them? The one that loves them the more and has proven it by unselfish devotion. It is usually easy enough to find that one. The one who nursed them when they were ill, stayed by them when they were helpless, thought of them first in times of stress, that is the one to have them. Love and loyalty claims the prize. Selfishness seeks to divide it.

prepared for a very lively and exciting year in the domestic circle, with the interests largely centered on social, artistic or affectional engagements, although there is a hint of discord or regret if too much pressure is indulged in this direction. All pertaining to writings may flourish, new contracts and business are in order and speculations may prove profitable.

A child born on this day should be versatile, intellectual and artistically inclined, with many talents and graces making for success and happiness in life.

Q. What is the origin of the expression, "He who runs may read?"
 G. F. R.
 A. "He who runs may read" is traced to the poem called "The Flowers," by Tennyson.

TODAY'S HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A lively and possibly very exciting and adventurous day may be looked for according to the predominant planetary configurations. It is probable that this unusual activity may be confined to the realm of the home, in social, artistic or romantic engagements, in all of which a degree of reserve would not prove amiss, as high pressure conduct or more than ordinary might prove disquieting or annoying. There is a sign of favorable contacts with important interests, and with gain through writings or speculation.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. IRVING S. CUTLER

MUSCLE FATIGUE AND GLYCOCELL

We never cease to marvel at the numerous and complex chemical reactions that are occurring constantly in the body. While digestion may be considered a simple affair, yet in order to duplicate in the laboratory the chemical operations that take place within the body each hour would require delicate and expensive apparatus, scores of workers, and months or even years of time. In fact, it is perhaps not too much to say that many of the chemical processes which are occurring regularly within the living organism have never been reproduced in man-made laboratories.

One of the most interesting phases of digestion is the transformation of proteins taken in as food into simple compounds and their use in restoring muscle waste. The first steps in the digestion of proteins may be simply illustrated. It is first noted in the eyelids and the result is a marked drooping of the upper lid. The muscles of the eyeball are often involved, causing the symptom of the double vision. The muscles of the face, neck, and back, and those involving swallowing, are frequently affected. Peculiarly enough, there is no wasting of these muscles.

While the cause of the disease is unknown, it would seem reasonable to assume that there is some interference with the contracting power of the muscles, possibly due to some error in metabolism. In other words, there is a defective functioning of the substance needed by the muscles.

In the treatment of the disease ephedrine has been used. The effective dose of the drug, however, is so large that it may cause extreme nervousness and interfere with rest. Within recent years the feeding of glyco-cell has been shown to have beneficial cases are now known to have been helped under this plan.

W. M. Boothby advises that this particular amino-acid relieves the fatigue of muscles. He states clearly that while the disease is not cured, the administering of glyco-cell, either alone or in combination with ephedrine, is usually followed by improvement. Patients who have had the disease in mild form are nearly or entirely relieved of symptoms. Those in whom the disease is of moderate severity are made comfortable and many function with average physical efficiency.

Fixing the Diet
 When the full amount of glyco-cell is given (one ounce per day) it is divided into six doses and is evenly distributed throughout the day. It has been suggested by investigators in this particular field, that small doses of glyco-cell taken daily about 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the so-called zero hour in alertness, will relieve the feeling of depression and fatigue. It has also been observed that those with stable nervous systems respond better to the administration of this substance than do those who are of the nervous, emotional type.

In glyco-cell the physician has an assistant food that in many cases relieves fatigue. We know that the body can manufacture glyco-cell, but in certain persons perhaps the body is unable to produce as much glyco-cell as it needs.

Some day soon we may expect to be invited, not to 4 o'clock tea, but to a 4 o'clock glyco-cell hour, where all and sundry may banish fatigue via the amino-acid route.

TEETH APPEAR SLOWLY
 Worried writes: What is the cause of a child's 14 months old having only two teeth? Is there something wrong in her diet? She is healthy, weighs 23 pounds and has a balanced diet.

REPLY
 Sometimes teeth are delayed in erupting. X-rays would show accurately whether or not the teeth are present in the jaw. Perhaps the mother's diet during the period of pregnancy was not as rich in calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D as it should have been.

If the child's diet is now proper, delayed eruption of teeth can be safely disregarded.

SALT IN DIET
 L. S. writes: How much salt should a person eat in a day?

REPLY
 As a rule very little salt need be used at the table. Less than a teaspoonful a day in all the food eaten is more than enough to maintain the body's chlorides.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Cutler will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

HOW DO YOU LIKE YOUR NEW DAUGHTER-IN-LAW, EMMA? I HEAR SHE WAS RAISED WITH A SILVER SPOON IN HER MOUTH

YES, SHE NEVER WENT NEAR A KITCHEN STOVE UNTIL THEY WERE MARRIED. BUT I TOLD HER TO USE CALUMET IN HER BAKING AND NOW SHE DOES JUST FINE!

GOOD BAKING'S EASY WITH CALUMET-FOR ITS REALLY TWO BAKING POWDERS IN ONE!

A QUICK ONE FOR THE MIXING BOWL—ITS ACTION SET FREE BY LIQUID. IT STARTS THE LEAVENING PROPERLY

A SLOWER ONE FOR THE OVEN—ITS ACTION SET FREE BY HEAT. IT PROTECTS THE BATTER OR DOUGH ALL THROUGH THE BAKING

"That's why your baking is bound to be better with Calumet's Double-Action. And here's my favorite Calumet cake recipe... just try it!"

MOTHER EMMA'S CALUMET HARVEST CAKE

2 cups sifted Swans Down Cake Flour
 2 teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 cup butter or other shortening

1/2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
 2 egg yolks, unbeaten
 1/2 cup milk
 1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, beat well. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in greased pan, 8x8x2 inches, in moderate oven (350° F.) 45 minutes or until done. Spread boiled frosting made with brown sugar on top and sides of cake.

(All measurements are level.)
